Endure Discipline as Sons (12:4-11)

<sup>4</sup> In your struggle against sin you have not yet resisted to the point of shedding your blood. <sup>5</sup> And have you forgotten the exhortation that addresses you as sons?

“My son, do not regard lightly the discipline of the Lord, nor be weary when reproved by him. <sup>6</sup> For the Lord disciplines the one he loves, and chastises every son whom he receives.”
[Prov 3:11-12]

<sup>7</sup> It is for discipline that you have to endure. God is treating you as sons. For what son is there whom his father does not discipline? <sup>8</sup> If you are left without discipline, in which all have participated, then you are illegitimate children and not sons. <sup>9</sup> Besides this, we have had earthly fathers who disciplined us and we respected them. Shall we not much more be subject to the Father of spirits and live? <sup>10</sup> For they disciplined us for a short time as it seemed best to them, but he disciplines us for our good, that we may share his holiness. <sup>11</sup> For the moment all discipline seems painful rather than pleasant, but later it yields the peaceful fruit of righteousness to those who have been trained by it.

4 In your struggle against sin you have not yet resisted to the point of shedding your blood.

- In his endurance of the hostility of sinners, Christ had suffered death.
- So too did many of the heroes of the faith celebrated in chapter 11. Some of them are described as having been “tortured, refusing to accept release, so that they might rise again to a better life.”
- The recipients of this letter had in earlier days endured severe persecution for their faith, but they had not yet been called upon to die for their faith.
- There might yet be more severe trials coming their way, but this was no time to be discouraged, considering that others had remained steadfast while enduring suffering much worse than theirs.
- Instead, they ought to realize that their present hardships were a token of their heavenly Father's love for them, and the means by which he was training them as a father would train his sons.

<sup>5</sup> And have you forgotten the exhortation that addresses you as sons? “My son, do not regard lightly the discipline of the Lord, nor be weary when reproved by him. <sup>6</sup> For the Lord disciplines the one he loves, and chastises every son whom he receives.” [Prov 3:11-12]

- The readers' dismay over their present suffering is partly due to the fact that they have “forgotten the exhortation” given to them in the Scriptures.
- The author clearly believes that the words recorded in Prov 3:11-12 should be an encouragement to the readers of his day.
- These are not merely words of antiquity directed to a former generation.
- What was written long ago is also addressed to contemporary readers.

<sup>5</sup> And have you forgotten the exhortation that addresses you as sons? “My son, do not regard lightly the discipline of the Lord, nor be weary when reproved by him. <sup>6</sup> For the Lord disciplines the one he loves, and chastises every son whom he receives.” [Prov 3:11-12]

- The Greek word translated “exhortation” (paraklesis), is part of a word group used throughout the book of Hebrews (cf. 13:22) that has a range of meanings that includes stern exhortation (admonition) as well as warm encouragement (comfort).
- Here the tone of the Proverbs citation and the author’s application of it seems to favor the idea of a heartening encouragement.

<sup>5</sup> And have you forgotten the exhortation that addresses you as sons? “My son, do not regard lightly the discipline of the Lord, nor be weary when reproved by him. <sup>6</sup> For the Lord disciplines the one he loves, and chastises every son whom he receives.” [Prov 3:11-12]

- Proverbs 3:11 seems to describe different reactions to the Lord’s discipline: on the one hand “regard[ing] it lightly” and on the other “be[ing] weary.”
  - The first response (“regard lightly”) is that of an arrogant son who ignores his father’s discipline
  - The second (“be weary”) is that of an insecure son who construes his father’s reproof as personal rejection.
- Both of these reactions demonstrate a forgetfulness of the truth of Proverbs 3:12: “the Lord disciplines the one he loves, and chastises every son whom he receives.”

<sup>5</sup> And have you forgotten the exhortation that addresses you as sons? “My son, do not regard lightly the discipline of the Lord, nor be weary when reproved by him. <sup>6</sup> For the Lord disciplines the one he loves, and chastises every son whom he receives.” [Prov 3:11-12]

- Those who respond to the adversity that God brings into their life either by challenging God’s authority or by doubting his good purposes, have “forgotten” that such suffering is a token of:
  - Gods love
  - Their legitimacy as his sons.
- The situation envisioned in Proverbs is fatherly correction when a son misbehaves (cf. Prov 13:24; 19:18; 22:15; 23:13-14).
- The author of Hebrews widens the perspective on “discipline” to include afflictions suffered as the result of faithfulness in resisting sin.

<sup>5</sup> And have you forgotten the exhortation that addresses you as sons? “My son, do not regard lightly the discipline of the Lord, nor be weary when reproved by him. <sup>6</sup> For the Lord disciplines the one he loves, and chastises every son whom he receives.” [Prov 3:11-12]

- Those who suffer for righteousness' sake, as well as those disciplined to wean them from sin, can be assured that the pain that they're enduring will ultimately serve their Father's loving purpose for them:
  - Blessed are those who are persecuted for righteousness' sake, for theirs is the kingdom of heaven. Blessed are you when others revile you and persecute you and utter all kinds of evil against you falsely on my account. Rejoice and be glad, for your reward is great in heaven, for so they persecuted the prophets who were before you.
(Mat 5:10-12)

<sup>5</sup> And have you forgotten the exhortation that addresses you as sons? “My son, do not regard lightly the discipline of the Lord, nor be weary when reproved by him. <sup>6</sup> For the Lord disciplines the one he loves, and chastises every son whom he receives.” [Prov 3:11-12]

- The stresses and strains suffered by the original readers were not unusual but are a part of what happens in the life of everyone who belongs to the family of God.
- Discipline, in this context, is not a sign of God’s anger or punishment but of his favor and acceptance.

<sup>7</sup> It is for discipline that you have to endure. God is treating you as sons. For what son is there whom his father does not discipline? <sup>8</sup> If you are left without discipline, in which all have participated, then you are illegitimate children and not sons.

- The readers “have to endure” because “God is treating [them] as sons.”
- In the Greco-Roman world it was not unusual for a nobleman to subject his legitimate son and heir to a rigorous upbringing under the severe tutelage of a guardian, since the future of the father’s name and estate would eventually rest with that son:
  - The heir, as long as he is a child, is no different from a slave, though he is the owner of everything, but he is under guardians and managers until the date set by his father. (Gal 4:1-2).

<sup>7</sup> It is for discipline that you have to endure. God is treating you as sons. For what son is there whom his father does not discipline? <sup>8</sup> If you are left without discipline, in which all have participated, then you are illegitimate children and not sons.

- Meanwhile, illegitimate children, since they did not bear their father's name nor stand to inherit his property, might be left without moral discipline.
- So, to be spared God's painful discipline is indicative not of his favor but of his indifference and rejection.

<sup>9</sup> Besides this, we have had earthly fathers who disciplined us and we respected them. Shall we not much more be subject to the Father of spirits and live?

- An analogy is drawn here between “earthly fathers” and the discipline they mete out, and God’s discipline of his children.
- “Earthly fathers” discipline their children, and their children respect and honor them.
- If that’s true of “earthly fathers”, how much more should this be true of God’s fatherly discipline?
- Often in the letter “earthly” is contrasted with “heavenly” (e.g. Heb 12:25-26), and such a comparison appears again here.
- The “heavenly,” of course, is always superior to the “earthly.”

<sup>9</sup> Besides this, we have had earthly fathers who disciplined us and we respected them. Shall we not much more be subject to the Father of spirits and live?

- From this, it follows, that the readers should respect and honor God for the discipline he wisely appoints for them.
- And it goes even further than this.
- They should “be subject to” such a father, recognizing that he disciplines them in wisdom and love.
- Indeed, God disciplines, not to destroy or slay them, but so that they will “live” (forever with him).
- Discipline does not jeopardize eternal life. In fact, it is the pathway by which eternal life will be realized.

<sup>9</sup> Besides this, we have had earthly fathers who disciplined us and we respected them. Shall we not much more be subject to the Father of spirits and live?

- The author uses a somewhat strange phrase here: “Father of spirits.”
- Usually the word “spirits”, when used alone, refers to angels or heavenly beings, but in this context it probably refers to human beings.
- It’s difficult to know why the author chose to use the word “spirits.”
- Perhaps he does so because he contrasts the earthly and the heavenly.
- In any case, the author emphasizes God’s sovereignty and love in the lives of human beings.

<sup>10</sup> For they disciplined us for a short time as it seemed best to them, but he disciplines us for our good, that we may share his holiness.

- This verse (verse 10) further explains the previous verse (verse 9).
- Verse 9 tells us that “earthly” fathers who discipline are “respected” by their children.
- But here in verse 10 it tells that the “earthly” father’s discipline is of limited benefit:
  - Parents train their children “as it seemed best to them” and therefore their discipline is imperfect and flawed.
  - Sometimes parents make mistakes in the discipline of their children, even if they have the best of intentions.
  - The discipline of parents is also limited from another perspective: It is “for a short time” and restricted to the few days in which parents are in charge of their children.

<sup>10</sup> For they disciplined us for a short time as it seemed best to them, but he disciplines us for our good, that we may share his holiness.

- God's discipline, on the other hand, does not suffer from imperfect knowledge.
- He always knows what his children need, and therefore his discipline is always “for our good.”
- The result of God’s discipline is that “we may share [God’s] holiness”.
- God trains believers so they become more righteous.
- Believers, therefore, should “be subject to” to God’s discipline (as it says in verse 9) and endure it, since it is “for our good.”

<sup>11</sup> For the moment all discipline seems painful rather than pleasant, but later it yields the peaceful fruit of righteousness to those who have been trained by it.

- The author acknowledges here that “discipline seems painful rather than pleasant”.
- But in the long run, discipline yields a harvest that makes the “painful” training worthwhile.
- The fruit produced by discipline, the author tells us, is “the peaceful fruit of righteousness.”
- “Righteousness” is another way of describing “holiness” (mentioned in verse 10).

<sup>11</sup> For the moment all discipline seems painful rather than pleasant, but later it yields the peaceful fruit of righteousness to those who have been trained by it.

- What is emphasized here is that such “righteousness” is “peaceful”, that is to say, it is pleasing and satisfying.
- The contrast between present pain and future benefits brings to mind what was said about Moses in Heb 11:24-26.
- He rejected the pleasure he could have enjoyed as Pharoah's daughter in the present and instead chose to suffer with the people of God in order to obtain a future reward.

*Class Discussion Time

- God disciplines us by providentially bringing difficult and painful experiences into our lives.
- Sometimes God the difficult and painful experiences that God uses to discipline us are a direct result of our rebellious behavior – but sometimes not.
- Because of this, we can't always know why God has providentially brought difficulties into our lives.
- The comfort we have from this passage is that regardless of why God has brought pain and difficulty into our lives, his design is always to sanctify us, and so we should always receive them with thanksgiving.
- Obviously, this is easier said than done!
- Can you think of an experience that you'd be willing to share with the class, where God brought pain and difficulty into your life that you believe caused you to progress in your sanctification?

*Class Discussion Time

- Our author compares the discipline that God brings into the lives of his people with the discipline given by “earthly” parents to their children.
- We live in an society where parental discipline seems to have fallen out of favor in many quarters.
- So I thought it might be good for us to reflect briefly on some of the principles that the author references concerning parental discipline.

*Class Discussion Time

- 7<sup>b</sup> For what son is there whom his father does not discipline?
  - The assumption here is that it's a given that a father will discipline his children. To be a good father, you must properly discipline your children.
- 8 If you are left without discipline, in which all have participated, then you are illegitimate children and not sons.
  - A father who fails to properly discipline his children is treating them as though they are illegitimate children.
- 9 ...we have had earthly fathers who disciplined us and we respected them.
  - A father who does properly discipline his children is worthy of being respected by them and normally will be respected by them – especially when they grow up and perhaps have children of their own.

*Class Discussion Time

- <sup>10</sup> For [our earthly fathers] disciplined us for a short time as it seemed best to them.
  - We only have a short time in which to raise our kids, make the best of it!
  - No parent is perfect. But our parents, in most cases, disciplined us in the way they thought best. As such, we should appreciate their efforts and not be overly critical.
- <sup>11</sup> For the moment all discipline seems painful rather than pleasant, but later it yields the peaceful fruit of righteousness to those who have been trained by it.
  - In order for discipline to be administered properly, it must be painful. Discipline that is not painful, will be largely ineffective.
  - Nobody – neither the parent nor the child – enjoys the pain caused by discipline. But, in the long run, the benefits of properly administered discipline far outweigh the pain that discipline causes for both the parent and the child.
